

What is your key takeaway from our discussion today?

there are so many creative fun ways to build in connection into curriculum

Intentional kindness is a powerful connector

Food is a great-standard connector

Creating connection in our courses is worth the effort and it does not take much!

Interest in sharing our humanity with our students, and seeing them as individuals

Small yet meaningful acts of care and kindness can create connections

That there are so many creative ways I hadn't thought about to build a supportive community in my asynchronous class.

Padlet with Worries and Wishes would be a really good way for peer educators to connect with each other! Thank you for the idea!

Attending to student well-being also helps enhance our own well-being

What is your key takeaway from our discussion today?

I loved the pairing idea and integrating acts of kindness

These reflections are wonderful. Thank you all!

Acts of kindness are so important for students to connect, especially virtually!

Reinforces the importance of varied mindful practices across every functional areas of campus.

I noticed that the online environment due to COVID increased the willingness to gather for study groups